For the fourth consecutive year, Cemig has been selected by the Carbon Disclosure Project (CDP) in Latin America as one of the ten best Brazilian companies in climate change practices. Cemig's high score – 99 out of 100 points – in this annual assessment is a clear demonstration, to the Brazilian and international capital markets and the general public, of its commitment and stance in relation to climate change.

Cemig was also first-placed by CDP in Latin America in use of an internal carbon price. The Company's experience will be transformed into a case study. This is a pioneer initiative which selected initiatives on three themes – Water resources management, Use of an internal carbon price, and Management of natural capital – among the 23 companies placed highest in the survey. These experiences were evaluated by an Adjudication Committee of members of CDP's Technical and Consultative committee, with representatives of investors, specialists, industry associations, corporate organizations and academics.
